

I would like to say that the Indiana Telephone Privacy law should stand as it is. It has made things alot easier at my house. We would get all set down to dinner, one of the few times we are actually together during the day, the next thing you know the phone rings. It would always be a telemarketer. Most of the time it would be for something we had no need of. Even if we were polite the person on the other end of the line would keep going and most of the time we would just hang up on them. Please let the law stand as it is. Thank-you for your time.
